Chemical Peel or Microdermabrasion?

How does Lébo Skin Care Center resurface skin?

Medical estheticians at Lébo can promote the growth of healthy skin cells through the process of skin resurfacing in two different non-surgical ways. Chemical Peels involve the topical application of acids that cause the outermost layer of skin to exfoliate, exposing the freshly rejuvenated layers underneath. Microdermabrasion is a manual way of exfoliating the skin using a skin resurfacing wand with a diamond encrusted tip.

What conditions can be improved by these procedures?

Patients with sun damage, age spots, fine lines & wrinkles, uneven pigment, acne scarring, clogged pores, or oily skin can all benefit from chemical peels or microdermabrasions.

How much discomfort will I experience?

Chemical Peels usually create a mild to moderate stinging sensation that lasts only a few minutes until the acid self-neutralizes.

Patients having a microdermabrasion treatment can expect only a minor scratching sensation and suction from the vacuum removal of dead skin cells.

How long is each treatment?

Chemical Peels and microdermabrasions take about 30 minutes.

How will I look after the treatment?

After either procedure, the patient can expect minor flushing usually lasting no more than a few hours. Because exfoliated skin is vacuumed away during microdermabrasion, there will be little to no flaking or peeling of the skin. A few days after a chemical peel a patient can expect to peel, but every patient does react differently.

Which one is best for me?

Lébo's experienced team of medical estheticians are glad to discuss these options and more with you. Call today to schedule your free consultation at 717.747.9950 in York and 717.646.9950 in Hanover.

"The staff at Lébo is exceptional!!! I came to the Hanover office with brown patches on my face. After having a free consultation with Dana, she outlined a plan specifically for me. Getting regular chemical peels have made the brown spots disappear! Sharon is helpful when I need help choosing products as well. Thank you for keeping my skin beautiful!"
